PREFACE.

THE following genealogy of Robert Seaver, of Roxbury, Mass., and his descendants, is confined, chiefly, to a few of the branches of Caleb, Joshua, and Nathaniel. Individual members of those respective lines have kindly furnished portions of the information incorporated in these pages; but a greater part of the names and dates here used have been taken from the public records of Roxbury, Dorchester, Brookline, Boston, and Cambridge. Some who have been called upon have either declined or neglected to give what was needed to make these sketches more complete. Should there be found a deficiency in the genealogical details where such parties are interested, the compiler feels in no degree responsible for such deficiency. It is hoped that what is here printed may be in general reliable, correctness having been aimed at in all the particulars. It is respectfully dedicated to those bearing the name, their connections, and friends. Should the members of the family feel inclined to concentrate their efforts, a more extended and valuable genealogy and history might be produced.

The Appendix contains an account of the possessions of Robert Seaver, the emigrant, with an abstract of his will; also, abstracts of the wills and inventories of a number of his descendants.

THE SEAVER FAMILY.

ROBERT SEAVER was born about the year 1608. The place of his nativity has not been ascertained, but the conjecture is, that it was in England.* On the 24th of March, 1633-4, at the age of about 25, he took the oaths of supremacy and allegiance to pass for New-England, in the ship "Mary and John," of London, Robert Sayres, master. (See "Founders of New-

* The annexed is the coat of arms of the Seaver family of Heath Hall, co. Armagh, Ireland. This is the only Seaver coat of arms that we have ever seen or heard of, after a due examination of all the heraldic works that have come under our notice. No connection, however, has been established between the Heath Hall family and the one that settled in Roxbury. The coincidence, surely, is singular, that the Seaver and Heath families of Roxbury have been, in one or more of its branches, related to each other.

It gives us much pleasure to be able to furnish here, an extract of a communication from the Rev. Charles Seaver, incumbent of St. John's church, Belfast, Ireland, to a gentleman of the same name in this city, in reply to inquiries on this subject. The letter is dated, 16 Botanic Avenue, Belfast, Aug. 25, 1871. "The only information I have or can procure," he writes, "is that an ancestor of mine was settled in the Townland of Trea, near Armagh, which he held under the Primate of that See. He married a Miss Symonds, granddaughter of Sir Marmaduke Whitechurch, to whom a grant was made of the abbey lands of Killeary, in the 7th of James I., about 1610. This was about 1650, at which date, they, i.e. the Seavers, were settled at Trea. According to tradition, the ancestor came in Cromwell's army to Ireland; if so, this must have been him; his name was Charles. I searched the Registers at Armagh, but they were not kept before 1750, when the burial of Jonathan Seaver of Trea is noted. What part of England they came from, I have never England," by Samuel G. Drake, page 70.) He reached Roxbury, Massachusetts, it is probable, previous to June, 1634. On the 10th of December of that year, he married Elizabeth Ballard. In the list of those who had taken the requisite oath, March 26th, to pass for New-England, in the above named vessel, we find the name of William Ballard, who it is presumed was a fellow passenger with Mr. Seaver, and a relative, not unlikely, of Elizabeth. The Roxbury Town Records, in giving the marriage, has the name "Allard;" but the Church Records, in the early list of admissions, has the following explicit paragraph. "Elizabeth Ballard, a maide servant,—she came in the year 1633, and soone after joyned to the church,—she was afterwards married to Robert Sever of this church, where she led a godly conversation." Mr. Seaver was made freeman, April 18, 1637. The name is variously written on the Records, Seaver, Sever, Seavers, Civer. Robert, the ancestor, wrote his name "Seaver," as will be seen by the facsimile, here given, of his signature to a petition to the General Court, dated May 31, 1647, signed by sixty-four freemen and soldiers of Roxbury, praying the confirmation by the Court of Hugh Pritchard as captain of a military company in that town, he being heard. A branch of the family professing the Roman Catholic religion is settled near Dublin, but they have no better information. The change in their religion was effected, I have heard, by a Roman Catholic nurse. I have searched all the available books on genealogical matters to which I had access, but found nothing further. I enclose the Coat of Arms, Crest and Motto, which we have used at least for a century, but I believe they were then chosen by my grandfather, and that the original Coat of Arms, if any, were lost. I think Burke contains almost all the particulars of which I am informed, and your friend seems to have the books."

The coat of arms herewith presented is substantially the same as the one above alluded to, with the crest and motto, and is thus described in Burke's Heraldic Illustrations, accompanied, also, with an engraving:—

Arms.—Argent a chevron gules between three doves pecking sheaves of wheat, proper.

Crest.—A hand and arm, holding a sword erect, encircled by a laurel wreath, all proper.

Motto.—Sume superbiam quesitam meritis. [Assume the pride acquired by merit.]

chosen by these persons to act as their commanding officer. This request was complied with, as appears by the entry on the Colony Records at the May session of the same year. "Mr. Prichard, being chosen capt. of y^e traine band in Roxberry, is confirmed by ord^r of this Co^rte."

In 1635, the General Court agreed that "noe dwelling howse shalbe built above halfe a myle from the meeteing howse, in any newe plantacōn," "without leaue from the Court (except myll howses & Ferme howses of such as have their dwelling howses in some towne)." This was confirmed the next year, with an addition to the order, that it should extend to all towns within their jurisdiction. The above statement will explain the following grant of the Court to Robert Seaver and others, May 23, 1639.

"Jasper Gun, Robert Seaver, Abraham Howe, John Tatman and Ralph Sary, vpon their petition, had leave granted them to continue in the houses w^{ch} they have built, and do dwell in, though they bee above halfe a mile from their meeting house." This "halfe a myle law" was repealed in 1640.

Robert Seaver was chosen one of the selectmen of Roxbury, Jan. 15, 1665. Elizabeth, his wife, died June 6, 1657. The Church Record says:—"1657. Buryed, mo. 4, day 9, Sister Seaver, y^e wife of Robert Seaver." Also, "1669, mo. 10, day 18, wife to Robert Seaver buryed." He must have had a third wife, for in his will, made Jan. 16, 1681, proved July 5, 1683, he provides for his wife (christian name not given) and four children. The names of the latter were, Shubael, Caleb, Joshua, and son Samuel Crafts, who married his daughter Elizabeth. The latter was, probably, dead at the date of the will.

Robert¹ Seaver, according to the Roxbury Town Records, died May 13, 1683, aged about 75. The Roxbury Church Records say:—"1683, mo. 4, day 6, Robert Seaver an aged Christian buryed." How these dates are to be reconciled we are unable to decide.

9. NICHOLAS³ (Caleb,² *Robert*¹), b. April 15, 1680; grad. H. C. 1701; ord. Dover, N. H., over the First church, April 11, 1711, and resigned his charge there in the spring of 1715, on account of an impediment in his speech.

Previous to this, in the fall of 1708, the church in Haverhill, Mass., was in want of a pastor. Mr. Sever* was engaged and preached regularly to the people, for a specified time. The inhabitants of the town formally thanked him for his pains and labor in the work among them; desired his continuance and settlement; and chose a committee to confer with him about the matter. March 1st, another meeting was called, at which it was voted to pay Mr. Sever annually twenty pounds in money, and forty pounds in corn, as money, if he would settle in the town. Two weeks afterwards,

* The autograph of Robert¹ Seaver, the ancestor, appears on the Roxbury Town Records several times, where it is uniformly written Seaver, or what is equivalent, Seaver, as in the fac-simile on a previous page of the genealogy. Caleb,² the son, and twin-brother of Joshua,² wrote his name Sever, as did also his son Nicholas.³ The same manner of spelling has been retained in this branch of the family, while the descendants of the other three brothers, Shubael,² Joshua,² and Nathaniel,² as far as our knowledge of them extends, follow the first Robert.

they voted to add one hundred pounds in money to their former offer, "to be improved by him in settling himself with a house," and allow him the use of all the parsonage land. This was indeed a very liberal offer, and the fact that but four persons dissented from it shows that Mr. Sever was highly esteemed by the people of the town.

June 14th, another meeting was held to see about settling Mr. Sever, at which, the town voted to give him four contributions annually, and twenty cords of wood, in addition to what they had previously offered him. They then adjourned to the 21st, when Mr. Sever's proposals were received, read, and declined. The records do not inform us what his proposals were.

Mr. Sever did not continue to preach in town after his proposals were declined. He was succeeded by Rev. Richard Brown, who preached there twenty-four sabbaths. After this, a call was extended to the Rev. Joshua Gardner, who was ordained Jan. 10, 1711. The salary paid to Mr. Gardner seems to have been satisfactory to him, although it was not so large as the one offered by the town to Mr. Sever. Mr. G. died March 21, 1715. (See Chase's History of Haverhill, page 231.)

The interim of two years was spent, probably, by Mr. Sever, in preaching in those places where there chanced to be calls for his professional services. In the spring of 1711, as has been before stated, he was ordained in Dover, where he remained four years, and then resigned.

Mr. Sever was Tutor at Harvard College from 1716 to 1728, and Fellow from 1725 to 1728. Some time in the course of the latter year he resigned his office at Cambridge and removed to Kingston, Mass. On the 21st of November, following, he married at K., Sarah (Warren) Little, daughter of James Warren, who was a grandson of Richard Warren of the Mayflower. Her first husband was Charles Little. She died Aug. 25, 1756.

Mr. Sever was Judge of the Court of Common Pleas for the County of Plymouth from 1731 to 1762. On the 13th of October, 1757, he married Susannah Winslow.

While connected with Harvard College, as one of the officials, Mr. S. took a prominent part in the discussions which took place as to the relative rights, powers and duties of the Corporation and Overseers under the charter; for some of the particulars of which, see Quincy's History of Harvard University. There is a petition, also, extant, on this subject, signed by Nicholas Sever and Wm. Welsted, addressed to the General Court, Cambridge, June 27, 1727. A copy of this may be found in Ewer MSS., vol. i. p. 78, in the library of the N. E. Historic, Genealogical Society.

He died at Kingston, April 7, 1764, aged about 84. The children of Nicholas and Sarah were:—

21. i. William, b. Oct. 12, 1729; died June 15, 1809.

The notice that follows was furnished by Ebenezer Clapp, Esq., of Dorchester.

"Hon. Ebenezer Seaver was educated at Harvard College, from which institution he graduated in 1784.

Instead of studying a profession, as was the case with a large portion of the graduates of that day, he chose the calling of a farmer. The fine rich acres of his ancestors had descended to him, and he enjoyed their cultivation. His table was abundantly supplied with the best the market afforded, as the writer hereof can testify, and gave one the idea of a substantial country gentleman.

He was chosen a member of congress in Norfolk district from 1803 to 1813, a period of ten years. He was a member of the State Constitutional Convention of 1820. He was well versed in the history of his country, and true to what he held to be its highest interests. He belonged to the republican in distinction from the federal party of that day. He was in favor of the embargo, and advocated the declaration of war with Great Britain in 1812. He had much influence with the administration during his several terms in congress; was a great admirer of Jefferson, who was his model of a gentleman, a statesman and politician. Party spirit at that time was exceedingly high; and numerous were the insults offered him by his opponents, but he bore them with patience and great forbearance. He was, however, more intimately known to his townsmen by his long continued services as selectman, representative to the general court from 1794 to 1802, and moderator of their town meetings. Here he came in contact with his fellow citizens; he knew their history, and the history of their progenitors back to the first settlement of Roxbury. For many years he held the first named office, was generally chairman of the board, and administered their affairs with scrupulous integrity, wisdom and economy. Swindlers and impostors fared hard under his administration, and it was the prevalent opinion that he was more careful and attentive to the affairs of the town, than to his own. No person was so wealthy, or so high, but he would denounce him if he was dishonest. In 1832, the town of Roxbury passed him a vote of thanks 'for his long, faithful and unremitted services for nearly forty years past.'

Notwithstanding his peculiar views in relation to religious opinions and customs, holding sentiments which would now perhaps be termed of the free religious type, his friends, associates and the public had the most unbounded confidence in his integrity and honor. While he was not obstrusive in urging or parading his own views, he was candid, and tolerant of the opinions of others. With all these traits were combined many of the old puritan character. He was tender-hearted as a child; he felt deeply for the sufferings and woes of humanity, yet was firm in every post of honor or of duty, and inflexible against all encroachments prejudicial to the public weal, by whomsoever made.

In his death the town lost an honest man, his neighbors a counsellor and friend."

Charles W. Tuttle, Esq., assistant minister of the
 "He entered Dummer Academy in 1811, and there fitted for college. Two years later he entered Harvard College, and graduated in 1817, being the fourth graduate in his line of descent, his father, grandfather and great-grandfather having graduated at this institution. Among his classmates, afterward distinguished, were, Caleb Cushing, George Bancroft, and President Woods of Bowdoin College. While in college he gave much attention to military studies and exercise, and was member and commander of the Harvard Washington Company, a military organization composed of students of the senior and junior classes. On the occasion of the visit of President Munroe to Cambridge in 1817, this company performed escort duty under the command of young Sever. The president was so much pleased with his military bearing and capacity that he urged him to go to West Point, and qualify himself for a command in the army. The next year, having graduated, he was appointed a cadet in the Academy; but his mother prevailed on him not to accept the appointment, she being averse to such a calling, much against his own inclination. He immediately entered the law-office of Gov. Levi Lincoln in Worcester, and there pursued his studies two years. While yet a law student he delivered the 4th of July oration at Leicester, in 1820, his subject being, "The Era of Good Feeling." In October of this year he quit Worcester, and entered the merchant marine service, in the employ of the house of Thomas H. Perkins, of Boston. This he did at the suggestion and urgency of James Perkins of that firm. His first voyage was to the North West Coast of America. He continued in the service of this house till 1835, being part of the time in command of an East Indiaman. He commanded the "Alert," the first ship that ever entered the Canton River without issuing the usual rations of ardent spirits to officers and men.

On quitting the sea he settled in Boston, where he was member of the common council in 1850 and 1851. His refusal to pledge himself to a particular policy in reference to the fire department of the city, prevented his election to the office of alderman, by a few votes, in 1852. In 1853, and again in 1856, he was member of the house of representatives, and chairman of the committee of finance on both occasions. His reports on the financial condition of the commonwealth were regarded able state papers, and gave him the reputation of being master of finance.

His early fondness for military life never left him. He connected himself with the Independent Corps of Cadets, and was adjutant of the same in 1844. He devoted much time to the discipline of this company, "in order," to use his own words, "that by its example as a body guard to the governor of the commonwealth, it might stimulate the waning military spirit of the state militia." In 1849, having filled all the intermediate grades of office, he was elected lieutenant colonel of the Cadets, which office he held two years. On the occasion of the presentation of a standard to the Cadets in 1862, Col. Sever made a public address at the State House in the presence of the governor and other state officials, which was much commended for its aptness and for its ability.

For many years Col. Sever was recording secretary of the Society of the Cincinnati, and was elected president of the same in 1866. In 1869, he was chosen vice president of the General Society of the Cincinnati, at the annual meeting held at Trenton, New York. He felt great interest in the objects and purposes of this society; and he always found it a pleasant duty to discharge the various offices which he held in that organization.

In 1868, Col. Sever established a scholarship in Harvard College, giving $2,500 for that purpose. He directed the income to be given to meritorious under-graduates, preference being given to those from his native town, Kingston, or from Plymouth, the birth-place of his mother. He requested the selection of the beneficiary to be made without special reference to academic rank, and that "no sectional or denominational test" be required. He took a deep interest in this foundation, and it occupied his thoughts till the close of his days.

Late in life, as usual, he became inspired with a deep interest in the history of his ancestors. He secured the services of one of our most esteemed members, and proceeded to investigate and prepare for publication the history of the descendants of Robert Seaver, the emigrant, his great ancestor, from whom he was descended in the sixth degree.

His domestic life covered a period of thirty-five years, and was marked with few incidents. He married Dec. 7, 1836, Elizabeth Parsons, daughter of James Carter, of Boston, who survives him. They had no children.

In the spring of 1870, his health began to decline; this was followed by a prolonged illness, which ended in his death, January 16, 1871.

Col. Sever was a gentleman of marked traits of character, moral and intellectual. In his religious and political views he was eminently conservative. His integrity, firmness and intelligence qualified him for public employment. He had that true elevation of mind which commanded respect, and caused him to be esteemed by a select circle of acquaintances. He was chosen a resident member of this Society in May, 1869."

63. BENJAMIN¹ (Benjamin,⁶ Abijah,⁵ Nathaniel,⁴ John,³ Nathaniel,² Robert¹), b. April 12, 1795; m. Sarah Johnson, in Boston, Aug. 13, 1818; died Feb. 14, 1856. She was born in Leominster, June 17, 1796, and died Nov. 7, 1865.

The following notice of Mr. Seaver was furnished by Hon. George S. Hillard, of this city.

"Benjamin Seaver was born in Roxbury, April 12, 1795. In 1812 he entered the auction and commission store of Whitwell & Bond, as an apprentice. In 1816, when he had reached his majority, he was admitted as a partner, and the name of the firm was changed to Whitwell, Bond & Co. For a long period this house occupied a prominent position among the leading business firms of New-England, and none enjoyed more fully the confidence of the community. At the close of the year 1837, Mr. Whitwell and Mr. Seaver, in conjunction with Mr. Benjamin F. White, a special partner, formed a copartnership under the firm of Whitwell & Seaver. This firm was successful in business, and some years before his death Mr. Seaver was able to retire with a moderate competence.

In 1845, he was elected a member of the common council from ward five, and was re-elected in 1846 and 1847. The next year he changed his residence to ward four, but was retained in the council from his new constituency in 1848 and 1849. From July, 1847, he was president of the council, to the close of his term of service, two and a half years. He served in the house of representatives in 1846, 1847, and 1848. In 1850, he was elected to the senate, and was sent again the next year. In 1852 and 1853, he was mayor of the city of Boston. In all these public trusts Mr. Seaver was a diligent and conscientious public servant. He discharged the duties of all of them with exemplary punctuality and fidelity. He was uniformly courteous in manner, but firm in maintaining his own views. During his term of service as chief magistrate of the city, he was called upon to act on several questions on which the community was strongly divided. Mr. Seaver was always firm in adherence to his convictions, and though often bitterly assailed he never swerved from the line he had marked out for himself. During his term of office the Normal School for Girls and the Public Library were established, and various improvements were introduced into the public schools.

While yet a young man Mr. Seaver became much interested in the various societies and organizations in Boston for the relief of poverty and the removal of ignorance. He was an active member and officer of more than one of them. He made a public profession of his religious faith by becoming a member of the Twelfth Congregational Church in Boston, and long before his participation in political matters he held the office of deacon in the church under the pastoral care of the Rev. Samuel Barrett, D.D., and died in the office. Between him and his pastor there was an intimate and long continued friendship.

Mr. Seaver was eminently a public-spirited man. His thoughts, his time, his purse were ever at the service of every public cause which he espoused. According to his means, he was a generous benefactor to the poor.

In all the relations of private and domestic life Mr. Seaver was most estimable and amiable. No man had warmer friends, and no man better deserved to have warm friends. He had a sound understanding and a large amount of practical sense, which, in addition to his perfect integrity and strong sense of justice, caused him to be often appealed to for the settlement of business questions. His manners were simple, cordial, and attractive; and both in matters of substance and matters of form he was a gentleman. He had a nice tact and a delicate perception of what was due to all men.

After leaving the office of mayor Mr. Seaver visited Europe, and also travelled in the western states.

Though never a man of robust frame, he had always enjoyed good health, and from his active temperament and methodical habits he was able to do a great deal of work. But for some months before his death it was evident that his health was affected, though no serious apprehensions were entertained. His disease proved to be a scirrhus or cancerous affection of the intestines, from which he must have suffered much. But his death, which occurred Feb. 14, 1856, was without pain. The frame of mind in which he died was happily expressed in a remark he made the day before his decease: "I am willing to go, though perhaps not ready." His funeral, which took place on Saturday, Feb. 16, at Rev. Dr. Putnam's Church in Roxbury, was largely attended. Dr. Putnam and Dr. Barrett officiated. On Sunday morning, Feb. 24, 1856, Dr. Barrett preached an excellent sermon, giving a very discriminating sketch of Mr. Seaver's character, which was listened to by a large congregation."

SEEVER.—The following is the title of a sermon on the death of William Seaver, a native of Roxbury, Massachusetts:—

“Ignorance, the Parent of Crime.” A Sermon occasioned by the Death of WILLIAM SEEVER, who was murdered on the evening of July 6, 1821; Preached before the Unitarian Society in the City of Washington, on Sunday, July 15th, by ROBERT LITTLE. Washington: Printed and sold by W. Cooper, sold also by P. Thompson, and Davis & Force. 1821. 8vo. pp. 20.

We glean a few facts in relation to Mr. S. from a statement which was communicated by a confidential friend of the deceased, and published in this pamphlet.

At the early age of 19 he commenced business on his own account. In 1814 he removed to Baltimore, but owing to the depressed state of commerce which succeeded and the unstable credit of the western merchants whose transactions formed the chief trade of Baltimore, he became embarrassed; he settled with his creditors, and left for Washington in the winter of 1818. In November, 1820, he was concerned in a grocery store in that city. On Thursday, July 5, 1821, at 2 o'clock, P.M., he started for Alexandria with the intention of returning on Friday morning. In the afternoon of that day, having finished his business at Alexandria, he concluded to return on foot to Washington. Sunday morning, the toll-house keeper on the Alexandria road gave the alarming intelligence at Washington that the body of a murdered man had been found among the bushes, on the road side, near his house. It proved to be the body of William Seaver. According to appearances it had remained there from Friday evening, at which time the murder was probably committed. Liberal offers of reward were at once made by the authorities of the United States and the corporations of the cities of Washington, Georgetown and Alexandria, but nothing had been discovered at the time the discourse was printed relative to the catastrophe. Mr. Seaver left a wife and four children, the eldest of whom was thirteen years, the youngest sixteen months old.
